Hi Susanne and Kristine,

I know that you have been discussing this facility (both locations) with AZ DEQ. Before I email the person back, I wanted to check in with you.

I know the state was going back out to the Arlington facility. Should I direct this person to that contact at AZ DEQ?

Thanks,

Becky Mitschele

Mr. Tjerina,

Thank you for the photo. I am forwarding it to a staff person in our water division who handles animal waste issues for response. You should be hearing from someone shortly.

The photo is below. Is documentation for transfer of ownership of this overflowed waste water not a requirement at the time of discharge to Southern Pacific's property?

Hi Raul,

The Arizona Department of Environmental Quality (ADEQ) administers the State of Arizona's Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (AZPDES) Program. The AZPDES program includes the regulation of waste water and storm water point source discharges and the industrial pretreatment program. However, the EPA retains authority for discharges in Indian Country.

This is the contact webpage for the ADEQ's Water Division:
<http://www.azdeq.gov/function/about/water.html>. You can also file a complaint with the ADEQ online at <http://www.azdeq.gov/function/compliance/complaint.html>.

I hope you find this information useful,

Helga

This photo is from google maps, please go to google maps and zoom in on Hickman's egg farm in Arlington, Arizona. Not until Hickmans decided to put another farm in Tonopah, Az. across the street from my house did I take notice of their activities. This is just one of them. If they take short cuts at the Arlington farm they will take short cuts at Tonopah. Again take a look at the photo, standing non contained waste water will leach into our drinking water, our aquifer. It seems that Hickmans are not consistent with good agricultural practices. This cannot be part of their NMP. or be their BMP. This non contained waste water not only looks like, by the look of vegetation, it has been leaking for a long while, but also that drainage ditch does not even belong to Hickman. That drainage ditch is on Southern Pacific Rail Road property. I feel it is not in conformity with federal law. If my environmental concerns are mistaken please let me know. If there is nothing to worry about I apologize, but if I am right, at least I put my best foot forward on protecting our precious water supply. Raul.
